KAISER VIEWS ENTENTE REPLY TO WILSON NOTE

Issues Proclamation to German People Affirming Confidence in Final Victory-Ready for All Sacrifices, He Declares

AMSTERDAM, Holland (Saturday) -In a "proclamation to the German People," issued today, the Kaiser deals with the Entente reply to President Wilson's recent note. The Allies' purpose to crush Germany and enslave Europe is now, he declares, made clear; but as they have failed in 30 months of war and "unscrupulous ecos nomic" fighting to accomplish subjugation of the Central Powers, so will their future efforts fail.

The text of the proclamation is as follows: "Our enemies have dropped the mask. After refusing peace with scorn and hypocritical words of love for peace and humanity, they now, in replying to the United States, have gone beyond that and admitted their lust of conquest, the baseness of which is enhanced by calumnious assertions.

"Their aim is the crushing of Germany; dismemberment of her allied powers and enslavement of the freedom of Europe and the seas under the same yoke that Greece with gnashing teeth is now enduring.

"But what in 30 months of bloodest fighting and unscrupulous economic war they could not achieve, they will also fail to accomplish in the strength of will with which our fighters at the front and at home have borne all hardship and distress is a guarantee for the future that our beloved fatherland has nothing to fear. "Burning indignation and holy wrath will redouble the strength of every German, mah or woman, whether devoted to fighting, to work, or to suffering. We are ready for all sacrifices. The God who planted this glorious spirit of freedom in our brave people's hearts will also give us and our noble allies, tested in battle, full victory over all the enemy's lust for power and rage for destruction."

POST BELLUM LEAGUE CALLED UNAMERICAN

Condemns World Alliance to the war. New York Bar Association-

NEW YORK, N. Y .- Lindley M. Garrison, former secretary of war, in delivering his annual address before the New York State Bar Association last night, declared that a nation, like an individual, has all it can do to govern American the proposed post bellum league to enforce peace, to which the President has committed himself in his peace notes to the powers of Europe.

He expressed the opinion that there would probably always be wars, and asked if mixing in the affairs of other duce war than to pevent it. This was why he thought a world alliance dancies and principles singularly its own, and participation in a league of naa participation by aliens in the man-ination of our destinies.

"I, for one," he said, "would not consent to enter into any such agreement through fear. Fear, I mean, of what ight happen to my nation if I did not have the support of other nations, assured by alliance, in the event of aggressions against my nation. We have the means and the men to provide for our own safety and if we will not avail ourselves of them, we are not worth saving. I would not consent to enter any such alliance purely because of the supposed beneficent effect to other ns, unless it was essentially beneficial to my own nation.

"A nation, like an individual, has all it can do to govern its own concerns wisely and properly, and that is a task ilring its virtues, its strength and its intelligence. It can best serve mankind by developing itself along lines of its native and peculiar genius. If each nation so devoted itself there would be no need of an alliance to prevent war or preserve peace. It would hesitate long and consider horoughly whether mixing in the affairs of other nations of the world was not probably a surer way to proice war than to prevent it. A mesalliance is more likely to produce discord than if the respective parties had continued to live separate, self-respecting, self-reliant lives.

If such an alliance deals only with the triffing superficial things which de on the surface, then it never can mount to anything. If it, however, overs all questions between nations, then no nation has a right to enter it concerns decided by alien minds and

Last August the first meeting took place in Montreal, and after a frank and friendly discussion of the racial situation, the following resolution was passed unanimously:

"We, French and English-speaking Canadians, in conference assembled for the promotion of national unity, having established, by friendly intercourse, a mutual respect and a firm conviction in the innate fair-mindedness of the vast majority of both races, do hereby place ourselves on record as of the unalterable belief that there is not now, nor never will be in the future, any issue between the two races in Canada which canand, of right, should not be amicably and equitably settled, and in such a manner as to give satisfaction to the great majority of all concerned.

We have only to look down a list of the promoters of this league to see thick upon it the names of people whose sincerity we need not doubt when they talk of peace in a sentimental way, but whose methods of take place in Toronto on Jan. 8, 9 and giving their sentimentality a body of the law is made punishable by a fine 10, and for the past three days 80 of reality we believe will fail, and will of from $100 to $500, with confinement fail probably with disaster.

The league assumes that the recalcitrant state will be tabooped by the others, whereas the most likely thing to happen is that one-half of the league will go one way and the other the other way. Another possibility is that a league which unites the governing authorities of the European states will be an antidemocratic holy alliance.

This war, both in its origin and conduct, proves that whilst there are armaments there will be wars; that every war develops away from its originfrom Belgium to Constantinople; that this development makes a peace impossible except in the form of an armed military truce. Previous to the opening of the Legislature, there was much comment to no division of sentiment in the pres-bills. There is a determined and settled intention to get rid of the liquor this league there are people with evil. The experience hitherto has led temperance workers to prepare measures which will help to that end.

The first of the temperance bills is the antistorage bill. It simply makes the question of peace and war know it. unlawful for any person, firm or their attitude just as well as we know corporation in Tennessee to keep in stock in any place of business, warehouse or anywhere alse any intexicat-ing liquors, intended for sale either at wholesale or retail, as a beverage, or whether intended to be shipped or upon them what criticisms we think otherwise transported to any other

The bill makes it unlawful for any person, club, lodge or association, directly or indirectly, to keep or maintain by himself, itself or by association with others, or in any manner to aid in keeping any club or lodge in which liquor is received or kept by the person in his own name or otherwise for the purpose of use at the storage and club operations. They are fortified by another bill, proposing an amendment to the nuisance act, so that storage companies and locker clubs can be proceeded against under the nuisance act.

Another bill makes it unlawful for any person where the sale of liquor of foodstuffs by means of the un-"So soon as you get beyond those increase should be made in the funds of human right and justice and for tionalism, must remain an element in as a beverage is forbidden by law, to ceasing labor of all its members, and the aid of the defenseless of the political policy. The bill makes it unlawful for any person, either for himself or others, to have in his possession at any one time within a period of 30 days, more than one gallon of whiskey and 40 fints of beer. It matters not how the liquor is delivered, whether by express company or otherwise. The common carrier, or any person engaged in liquor delivery, shall file with the county clerk a complete record of every liquor delivery, and this record will be evidence in court. The only exceptions are ministers or denominations using liquor for sacramental purposes, druggists, common carriers engaged in interstate commerce and officials using liquors as evidence. In case of these exceptions, more than a gallon of Equor or 40 pints of beer may be possessed, but in no other. The act throws the burden of proof upon the defendant. The penalty is a fine of from $50 to $500, with a workhouse sentence.

The last of the antiliquor acts makes it a felony for a bootlegger to be caught the second time. The first offense is a misdemeanor. Frequently it carries a workhouse sentence. Upon conviction for the second offense a penitentiary sentence of from one to two years must be imposed. It will not be necessary for the State to prove a former conviction. The records are made prima facle byidence.

GERMAN PAPER'S OPINION ON THE FALL OF THE MARK

Frankfort Journal Calls for More Effective Use of Securities Owned by Germans Abroad

Special to The Christian Science Monitor FRANKFORT, Germany — The Frankfurter Zeitung, which is an authority on financial matters, takes a serious view of the fresh fall of the mark, which was recorded recently, and has called for energetic steps to NASHVILLE, Tenn:-Antiliquor bills be taken to deal with the situation. The position in this respect, it observed, was a disagreeable contrast the districts in the State are uniting military power afforded by the overfor endurance as illustrated by the passage of the Auxiliary Service Bill. German financial circles, it added, might be right in attributing the fall to enemy machinations devised to avenge the fall of Bucharest, but that did not alter the fact that it not only meant an increase in the cost of German imports and a corresponding rise in prices as home, but also a loss of German economic prestige abroad, and consequently a political and military reverse.

Even really neutral papers, the Frankfurter Zeitung complained, were showing an extraordinary ignorance of the actual facts in this connection, and were failing to recognize what should be clear to every one, namely, that the present fall of the mark was merely due to temporary war conditions such as Germany's isolation from the outer world, which had hampered her investments abroad and her exportation more than her importa-Germany's true economic strength, it insisted, was shown by the results of the various war loans, and here again it deplored the fact that a phrase coined in Germany—"The money remains in the country"—had been used abroad to bolster up the them again after having given them back to the population in the form of payment for war material, and so on Is it difficult to understand wrote the Whence could the German Empire obtain this loan of M.10,000,-000,000 or M.12,000,000,000 every six months or so if it were nothing more than a question of a childish game in which these milliards were simply passed round in a circle? In reality the money does not remain in the country at all, but is positively used up in gigantic quantities for the feedamong the members,

The penalty is a fine of from $50 to $500, with a sentence in the work-house two and a half years, for the unex-These two bills are aimed directly ampled accumulation of guns and ammunition, and for the quantities of other war material of all kinds which the war devours. And the mighty schievement of the German people consists in the fact that it is ever able to provide for this enormous consumption of goods, of munitions, and lated during long years of peaceful industry-of reserves represented by manufacturing plants, transport organizations, and so on, of which we are now making use, while we expect to recuperate by means of peaceful labor later on. That is German economic strength, not the outcome of an unfavorable rate of exchange.

The recognition of this, however, the Frankfurter Zeitung continued, did not remove the injurious consequences of the fall of the mark or the necessity for combating them. That necessity it declared, had been recognized much too late, and it was only recently that move had been made in the right direction by means of the limitation of unnecessary imports and the withdrawal of various embargoes laid on exports. What now remained to be done was to make much more effective use of property and securities owned by Germans abroad, and of German credit in other countries, and in this connection, it considered. Germany had much to learn from England's conduct of this economic war. That country, it observed, had mobilized her store of foreign securities on a grand scale, and had also made the fullest use of her credit abroad. Germany, on the other hand, had taken no official action with regard to the first matter, and congratulated herself with regard to the second on not having incurred the enormous obligations undertaken by her opponent. In future, however, the Franfort organ maintained, she must cease to be either so proud or so modest. It was true that by limiting her borrowings abroad to a minimum she had reserved her credit abroad for the period after the incitement to take advantage of these war when she would have such great opportunities will exist to a marked need of raw materials, but although these considerations had hitherto held that there is no longer a prospect of these terms. good, they were not tenable in the a further improvement of those terms.

RUSSIA'S NEED FOR AN OUTLET AT DARDANELLES

M. Miliukoff Looks to Possession of Straits as Inevitable Result of Russia's Social and Economic Development

Special to The Christian Science Monitor PARIS, France-Following upon M. Trepoff's announcement in the Duma that Russia's allies had recognized her right to Constantinople and the Straits, the Journal has published an interesting communication on the subject from M. Paul Miliukoff, the eminent Russian statesman, who is the leader of the Cadets, and who played so large a part in securing the retire ment of M. Stürmer.

Now that it is permissible to speak of the matter, he wrote, it is important that everything concerning it should be made known to the public, for the impression produced in Russia by a friendly reception of the announcement will be beneficial. The question of the Straits then, he explained, is a great and vital one for Russia, and dominates all others with her at the present time, just as that of Alsace-Lorraine does with France. She does not consider that to take possession of the Straits would be an act of annexation—the Russian Empire with its immense territories has no need of fresh conquests-but simply the logical and inevitable result of her social and economic development. As a national and territorial organism Russia is not complete, and cannot be until the day when the Dardanelles becomes an integral part of her empire. The infirmity from which she has suffered—especially since the Congress of Berlin-and which has been the cause of so many disappointments and reverses for herself and her allies State's Industries Brought an In- during the present war, must defin-

Much consideration has been given to the position that the United States now finds itself in. The facts are simply these: The President addressed a note to all belligerents for the purpose as explained authoritatively to vestigate the Lawson charges of Con- this bureau, of bringing about an end "wallowing in Wall Street of "intolerable conditions" that were making it constantly more difficult fo this country to maintain its position as a neutral. This condition was explained to apply directly to the submarine situation. So far as any person can see, the plan to bring about an end of intolerable conditions by the method used by the President has failed. So that it would appear to a disinterested observer that the same condition prevails today that led the President to dispatch his note.

Happily, friends of the Administration observe, no further submarine incidents involving citizens of the United States have occurred. VERMONT REPEAL OF PERRY BILL IS PROBABLE

Was to Become Effective Prohibition Measure Planned

Special to The Christian Science Monitor MONTPELIER, Vt .- The bill introduced by Representative Dunham of Brattleboro in the Vermont Legislature for the repeal of the Acts of 1915, known as the Perry Prohibition Bill, disapproved by a farge majority when submitted to a State-wide vote in March, 1916, has been favorably welling houses within the corporate reported by the Committee on Temlimits of Boston is sought by the Bos- perance, advanced to a third reading without opposition and will probably pass the House.

Prohibitionists agree that it should be repealed. Representative Dunham, who at the polls supported the Perry Bill, introduced by a fellow townsman, says: "I believe that it would be an injustice not to repeal the act, considering the mandate of the people against its adoption."

Under the Vermont practice, when a measure is submitted through a Staterce is not seeking to alter the wide vote, the referendum relates only in the Union. existing exemptions which permit the to the time when the law shall take effect, although to all intents and purposes the merits and demerits of the voted to the interests of prohibition, within the city limits and without the claim is made that any other form of showing the results of the use of alreferendum is unconstitutional in this cohol on the individual and social wel-State, and while some authorities differ fare. FOUR CAUSES ADVANCED FOR THE HIGH PRICES

Robert Luce, chairmen of the Massachusetts Commission on the High Cost of Living, who has been in conference with the officials of other states engaged in similar investigations, has returned to Boston con-vinced that the present high prices for commodities are due to four causes, the war, the decline in American food crops, increase in gold, and ulation in the necessities of life.

Mr. Luce sees a legislative remedy only in a general movement, national or international, for the substitution of a multiple standard of exchange stead of gold. He admits that there re certain commodities such as coal that are susceptible to governmental control, that there is much waste in n mind that he obtained the unanius indorsement in New York on

A dollar placed on interest in a savings bank in 1896, even with its accumulations of compound interest added, has less purchasing power today than it had 20 years ago. If every one who spoke of the high cost of living would substitute the expression the decrease in the

FOR MEN

It has become a well-established custom with us to offer our customers twice a year a sale of men's and women's fine grade sample hosiery, representing a very great variety, but assembled in special lots. Notwithstanding the existing conditions in the hosiery business today-and it is no exaggeration to say that there is hardly any line of goods which we carry where it is so difficult to keep ourselves supplied with goods which we can stand behind, and where the advances in prices are so serious we are again able to hold this semi-annual sale of sample hosiery, because the importers, who have made these sales possible in the past, have again liberally contributed from their great lines of samples. They evidently feel with us that these opportunities to dispose quickly of their sample lines are important to them, and that it is unwise to break the custom even if they could get, this particular season, much more for the goods. Every pair of these samples is guaranteed just the same as if you paid full prices.

MELBOURNE, Australia-"We candwelling on it or from being is selves ugly," said Mme. Melba in a farewell interview, published in the Argus, before leaving on a three months' visit to Honolulu. Later Mme. Melba vill go to England.

She intends to tour the provinces in England, giving the proceeds to the patriotic causes. She will sing in opera-if there is any.

"Even in this dreadful time there is the beauty of the noble heroism shown at the front," she said; "there is the beautiful patience and hope and continual help of the women left behind. Shall those who are united in time of war be disunited in time of peace? Surely we should have a continuance of love and understanding among all. Why should not each of us resolve to try our best that it shall be so?

"In this great wide country that we all love so much," continued Mme. Melba, "I think we should guard against any narrowness of outlook. against being too self-satisfied and unready to receive the best ideas from abroad. We should not be over-easily satisfied with our artistic endeavors, for instance. We should see that our best must be the world's best.

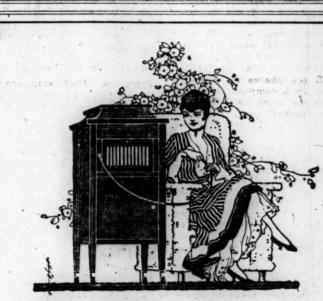

In bidding farewell to her girl students at the Albert Street Conserva-

M. Ribot dealt straightaway with these calumnies. The Bank of France, he said emphatically, does not make any profit at all in its dealings with the National Defense Loan, and he added that the convention to be entered into with the bank would take place sooner than was generally anticipated. To the objection raised by a Socialist at this statement M. The Transgressor Pays

SPRINGFIELD UNION-To those that think of New York as a wide-open city the fines imposed by Justice Cohalan on 11 saloonkeepers convicted of selling drinks on Sunday will come as a great surprise. Each of the saloonkeepers was fined $1800, and there was an additional small assessment for the costs of court. There may be some prohibition states in which illegal liquor selling would be punished with equal severity, but in license states and cities it is not customary to impose fines of more than $200 or $300 on a first conviction unless the circumstances are unusually flagrant. The action of Justice Cohalan evidently indicates a purpose to compel observance of the Sunday law by all liquor dealers, and the severity of the penalty imposed in these cases doubtless was intended to serve as a warning to other fransgressors. That it will be effective is scarcely to be doubted

HIGH POLL TAX CIVIL SERVICE RULE RECEIPTS MARK

Garrett W. Scollard as Boston Collector in Two Years of Mayor Fitzgerald's Adminis-

Circular letters issued to every man assessed for a poll tax in the years 1905 and 1906 and direct personal appeal through the mails were the methods used by Garrett W. Scollard when he was collector of taxes for Boston poll taxes ever collected since Boston was incorporated in 1822. Not a man was sued, not a threat was made, but the percentage of poll taxes collected in 1906 rose to, 44.17, while the year previous but 26.70 per cent had been collected. The year following, 1907, Collector Scollard, who was appointed by Mayor John F. Fitzgerald on May 1, 1906, collected 43.25 per cent of the poll taxes.

Mr. Scollard resigned his office on March 17, 1908, after having collected a higher proportion of the poll taxes than had ever been secured as the result of the appeals he made to the men of the community to do their duty as citizens and pay their taxes. He pro-Scollard asked and received the support and cooperation in his campaign

The collector sent some 125,000 cirquestion, Richard H. Dana, president culars to the assessed polls in the fall dredging of the greater part of the of the National Association for the of 1906 reminding them of their duty Promotion of Civil Service, explained to the Nation, State; and city under the that the reason the Civil Service Com- law to pay poll taxes of $2 each per mission had taken the matter under annum. He followed this up with a second letter, and a third appeal was made later the same year.

In addition to the personal circularization, which cost the city the first plaints coming from library employees year Collector Scollard did it, over $10,-000 for postage alone, he sent special appeals to the officials of the railroads, the Civil Service Commission, said that the Boston Elevated Railway Company, under the present method of selection the Edison company, the telephone the Edison company, the telephone company, the gas company, the department stores and other employers of many individuals asking them to cooperate with the collector of taxes in urging their employees to do their duty and pay their poll taxes.

Response to this appeal of the tax collector was very generally complied with by the public service corporations. They directed the proper officials to appeal to the men to pay their taxes. The collector had represented to the employers of labor that men has already taken in the present great

If the situation is such at the present time that you cannot discharge this obligation I am perfectly satisfied to wait until conditions so change that you will be in a position to discharge your obligations. In the mean time I feel that I am entitled to at least an answer to my various communications."

The collector has always believed that it was the bringing to the individual attention of the citizens of their duty under the law to pay their poll taxes and the putting them on their honor to reimburse the city, which resulted in his making a larger percentage of poll taxes than any other collector has done before or since in the history of the city of Boston.

JAPAN'S ATTITUDE TOWARD AUSTRALIA

By The Christian Science Monitor special Australian correspondent SYDNEY, Australia-The Japanese Society of Sydney recently entertained the venerable Dr. Batchelor, prior to his departure for Japan, and was welcomed by the Japanese consul-general. The latter spoke of the present condition of affairs in Australia. He touched upon the conscription question, which was then at its zenith, saying that it was entirely an internal affair for Australia, and he was not inclined to make any observations thereon, but in the presence of the company assembled, he would like to take the opportunity of saying a few words to the Japanese residents upon the matter of their attitude at the present juncture. Since this question has been brought forward, he said, I have been several times informed by my Australian friends, as well as by Japanese residents here, that our nation had been frequently referred to by public speakers for and against the conscription proposals. While, on the one hand, those in favor of conscription have urged as an argument upon their side that conscription is necessary in order to defend Australia from Japanese aggression, those upon the other side have asserted that if Australians were conscripted there would be an influx of Japanese labor into the Commonwealth. Thus it will be seen that the references to Japan are awkward and unpleasant from both sides.

and, I may add, quite baseless. One would have thought that the remembrance of the part which Japan cruelly untrue, but I strongly advise The result of these appeals was soon you individually to comport yourselves edge their error.

M. SEMBAT ON A PEACE AS FRANCE SEES IT

Special to The Christian Science Monitor PARIS, France-M. Marcel Sembat denounces all ideas of annexation on pleasure cars at the Baltimore show, the part of France at the close of the war. His article, which is a reply to M. Charles Maurras of the Action Francaise, appears in a recent issue of the Renaissance. The Germans, con- at Denver, Col., has been appointed querors in 1871, annexed Alsace and by the Automobile Trades Association Lorraine without any regard to the unanimous protests of the annexed populations says M. Sembat, and he continues: If the French, victors in PARIS, France-An artistic and lit- 1917, annexed German territories against the wish of the populations, they would be doing as the Germans did, and in my opinion they would be doing wrong. The whole question of annexation at the close of the war is to M. Sembat one of supreme importance since it involves the future both of France and of Europe. Out of sheer necessity the French army has had to follow the example of the German army in the use of asphyxiating gases, but a question which involves the conduct of the war and the righteousness of the Allies' cause is quite a different matter. France stands for a perfectly different civilization to that of Germany. France is different and therefore must act differently. It does not follow from this that we shall demand the disappearance of German civilization, says M. Sembat. Not at all. and it is just here that we differ most profoundly from the Germans. We respect the freedom of others to think as they like, to live as they like and to develop on their own lines. That the weak must give way before the strong is an axiom in Germany, the morality of which is never questioned. Week-End Conditions on Stock Exchange - Prices Sag -American Shares Are Irregular and Quiet LONDON, England-The big rush for the new war loan continued today. and trading on the Stock Exchange remained light. Conditions usual at the end of the week prevailed. On the whole the markets were in-87/3 clined to sag. and it was not expected that there would be any improvement during the time the loan lists are 51/2 open.

The general investment demand was negligible and gilt-edged issues lacked steadiness. The group was lower with 434 the exception of the 41/2 per cent war loan which was firm.

BIG RUSH FOR

NEW WAR LOAN

The American share - department was quiet and irregular. Canadians held well. Home lines were neglected and dropped again.

South American rails steadied after having receded during the week. Sentiment in Allied bonds was cheerful. A small line of Russia credit bills was paid off today.

The war group was the weakest whenever the downward movement was in progress. The rails, which have never shown much disposition to rise, sold off easily. New Haven was among the weakest of this class of securities. The trouble with the railroads is that they have not been in position to stand much prosperity. In er words the enormous amount of offered them during the era of great industrial activity throughout the United States was handled at great expense. For example the November income report of the New Haven road proper showed an increase in gross of 433,000 over the corrending month of 1915, whereas the net gain amounted to only $30,000. If the subsidiaries were to be inluded the showing would be a net

Terminal congestion has been unlerlying cause of the great increase Until this trouble can be remedied it would make little difference how much the roads should increase their equipment, as the han-lling of traffic would continue exceedngly costly. Another question of importance still unsettled is that of wages and hours of labor. This has en hanging over the market for nany months. It is considered doubtful, even though this matter should be banks are manifesting more and more interest, giving the market a broader mprove for the reason that the heavi-less of the remainder of the list would e likely to restrain an advance.

Traders profess to see a marked alling off in munition orders for United States concerns. They point to the fact that much of this business cause of the edict of the Federal ing shares. The heavy disbursements this onth and the continued inflow of gold have greatly increased the buying power so that even with the enorous output of new securities issued last year the question with in-yestors is where is the best place to mploy their funds. It is little wonder, n, that prices of securities have held at such a high level for so long in the face of much distracting news. here are plenty of safe investments out a man who buys stocks or bonds oes not like to see their prices deate after he has made his pur-

It is announced that the new British war loan will consist of 5 per ds to be issued at 95 and releemable in 30 years, with the Government having option to redeem at par in 12 years. There will also be a per cent issue put out at par, which will be free of income tax. The Chanellor of Exchequer announced that lders of a 41/2 per cent loan and of the 5 and 6 per cent exchequer bonds would have right to convert them into loan at par. A sinking fund will e established in connection with new

It is expected that the new loan will be the most gigantic single financial operation the world has ever seen. cial operation the world has ever seen. It may be the crowning event in present British financing. Besides former long term issues, which the British treasury has obligated itself to convert, is the great volume of treasury bills and other temporary obligations to be funded. To take up these and refund the old bonds, as well as provide new money, a sum well over $13,000,000,000 will be necessary. That $13,000,000,000 will be necessary. That financing by short term borrowing is to be stopped for the time being, is indicated by suspension of issuance of 6 per cent exchequer bonds, and, now, of treasury bills altogether.

There have been two former long term internal British war loans, the 3½ per cent 1925-28 issue and the 4½ per cent loan of 1925-45. The former carried no conversion privilege ormer carried no conversion privilege at by act of grace the bonds were convertible into 4½s on subscription convertible into 4½s on subscription of equal amount of new money. The 4½ per cent issue, originally put out about 18 months ago, expressly conveyed to holders the option of conversion into a higher subsequent issue. The old pre-war consols were taken at a cartain fixed price. It is to be assumed the 3½ per cent issue will be taken in exchange for forthcoming 5 per cent bonds on the hooming 5 per cent bonds on the

Columbia Official Says Orientals Are Busy in Making a Living -Blames United States for Militarist Agitation

NEW YORK, N. Y .- That Japan has load cargo here for a French port, it imitated the bad as well as the good points of Western civilization, and that it contains both militant expansionists and peace advocates just as the Occidental nations do, is the thesis of an article entitled "The American Bugbear," which has been written by Henry R. Mussey, associate professor of economics at Columbia University, and appears in the Survey, says the Post.

He blames the United States for having inspired much of the militarist agitation among the Japanese, and criticizes President Wilson's preparedness record. Professor Mussey bases his opinions on a trip which he took recently to Japan. He says in part:

"For half a century, but more especially since the Russian war, our myth-makers have been prodigiously busy, creating for us a people as different as possible from the hardworking, but not over-worked, poor, but not poverty-stricken, cheerful, but not hilarious, inhabitants of the island empire beyond the Pacific.

"Our first myth dealt with a race of cunning little yellow artistic geniuses. They sat forever in the moonlight under a flowering cherry branch, and gazed on the outline of Charterers of the American steamer Fujiyama. Responsibility for the militarist agitation in Japan lies largely with the United States, according to Professor Mussey, because of the latter's increasing appropriations for military, and more particularly naval, prepared ness and because of the emphasis given to the Panama Canal as increasing the available force of the United States fleet in the Pacific Ocean.

The Spring Sales of Lingerie

The spring "white sales," which of a woman's wish a few years ago mark the month of January in the —are given more prominence than shops, might well be called "pink the crepe and silk wear. The cars were made of wood, measuring about 51 feet 9 smoke and gas.

"As a contrast, the modern car is 85 feet long, nearly all made of steel, having so little wood that one workman could easily carry off all the wood used. The weight of a car is practically 70 tons, with its concrete floors, the space between the two trivances to keep out dirt and let in fresh air.

The Great Western had a sort of third rail for adjusting this difference in gauge. The Western World went from Detroit to Niagara, and the whole journey was a triumphal procession, admiring crowds appearing at every station. So enthusiastic was Erastus Corning over the car, that he telegraphed to his friend, Commodore Vanderbilt, in New York, that the car must be run on to New York, no matwhat it might cost. So it was run over the Harlem Railroad, the rails of which happened to be of the right gauge.

"The Western World was a hotel car, sleeping car and dining car combined. This trip which it made established the first through route. Two new hotel cars were soon put out by the Pullman Company, the City of Boston and the City of New York. Some of the rules on these first sleeping cars would astonish the modern traveler. In some of the old directions, given out to conductors, is found the following: 'Passengers will steel shells of the sides insulated with be required to remove their boots beasbestos, its steam heat, electric fore entering the berths.' It would be difficult to estimate the Alton railroad coaches, at Blooming-jeducational value that such an invention as the modern hotel on wheels affords the entire family, making it possible for a whole household to be transported from coast to coast with beginning of that great system of comfort and speed. In early days, all this was out of the question; much world over, and which has made it was lost by the child in the restricted knowledge and point of view of the mother and by the fact that the child's greatest channel for the practical study of geography and history was wanting. Nothing is so convincing as seeing things with our own eyes.

Cleaning Wicker Chairs

Many a housewife has discovered the difficulty of dusting wicker chairs. No amount of careful rubbing or fitcking of the feather duster can reach far into those crevices; there the delicately blended that no seasoning dust collects and there it ordinarily predominates.

Stays. But not long ago a woman—stays. But not long a and a very busy one, at that-hit upon a new plan for cleaning her wicker chairs. One by one she carried them which knows none of these things. The gain as regards economy is great, for not only is the outlay lessened by the elimination of the whole cost of grate. Grant fairly should be elimination of the whole cost of grate. A pewter urn, a queer majolica pitcher and some small silhouette portraits of an older day, transform this room in the heart of a great city into the comfortable "sitting Many people seem to consider that big Windsor chair at the chimney side, room" of the country home. An old wing chair, covered with the same print that hangs at the windows, adds the final touch to this homely interfor.

The Care of Salad Materials Only the freshest and best of materials should ever be used in a salad. It is a mistake to think that the mixing will hide poor quality.

Lettuce, endive, celery, and all salad greens should be carefully washed, crisped one hour in ice water, and put in a cheesecloth bag and kept near

A small lump of ice put into French dressing, while being made, keeps it cool and makes it milder A tiny pinch of sugar improves most dressings. The secret of making mayonnaise that will not curdle is in using perfectly fresh eggs, and cold pure o oil. Care and judgment are also needed; materials differ and have to be used accordingly. Stir in one direction only.

A heavy white porcelain bowl holding about one quart is a convenient size in which to mix mayonnaise: Place the bowl in a larger one of crushed ice.

Squeeze the lemon and strain the juice before beginning mayonnaise. When mayonnaise loosens or begins to curdle, put in a pinch of cornstarch or, if it separates after making, put an egg volk into a fresh bowl and gradually stir the mayonnaise into it.

It is not wise to use cream in combination with salad dressings, from the fact that lemon juice and vinegar curdle cream. The desired quantity of the following mixture is a good substitute: One cup of fresh, rich sweet milk thickened with 1 teaspoon of cornstarch cooked in a double boiler. When it begins to thicken, add one teaspoon of butter. When it is the consistency of thick cream, remove from the fire, beat well, and put near the ice until needed. It is used in all cream dressings.

When canned meats are used for salads, the can should be opened at least a half hour before using, the meat placed in a porcelain, glass, or china bowl, and thoroughly serated. Lettuce is so succulent and easy to bruise that breaking or pulling it to pleces is a more delicate way than cutting with a knife.

Salads should never be sour, but so

WHY does the world insist on attributing the Ninetieth Psalm to King David? The introduction to it distinctly places the burden upon Moses, though the internal evidence would acquit him of any hand in it. As a matter of fact the book of Deuteronomy records the fact that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." Life eternal, then, was not a condition to be attained, with a total disregard of logic, by a physical passage through the vestibule of death; and twenty years," which amounts and twenty years," which amounts it was to be attained mentally, through thoughts passing through the mentalto forty or exactly half as much again as the writer of the Psalm attributes to man at the utmost: "The days of Mind and its idea. The Allies' Reply

ON THURSDAY, in a simple but none the less impressive ceremony, in Paris, the President of the French Republic handed to the Ambassador of the United States of America the answer of the Entente Powers to the note addressed to the whole body of the belligerents, by President Wilson. It is maintained in Government circles in Washington that the original note was not a peace note. but there can be no question that it has been accepted as a peace note by the entire world, and as a peace note it was described and defended by some Democratic Senators, during the recent debate in Congress. As a peace note, in short, it was welcomed, with satisfaction, by the Powers of the Central Alliance, which had originally addressed to the various neutral countries representing them, in the belligerent area, a proposal for a consideration of peace terms; and as a peace note it was regarded, with equal dissatisfaction, by the nations which form the Entente Alliance. The reply states, quite frankly, that the Allies regard it as impossible at the present moment to secure a peace which will assure the only terms they are prepared to consider, terms which have been repeatedly summarized by them, in the words reparation, restitution, and guarantees. They gladly recognize, they insist, the President's desire for a league of nations, aimed at the maintenance of the world's peace, but they go on to point out that the very possibility of future agreement presupposes a satisfactory settlement of the present conflict, and it is such a settlement, at the present moment, that they regard as almost inconceivable. They take care, with the greatest exactness, to point out that they decline to hold themselves responsible for the outbreak or for the losses of the war, and they go on to express their satisfaction with the fact that the President's note was not intended to be associated with the German proposals. At the same time they also take advantage of the occasion to protest in the strongest way against the assimilation established by the President's note between the two groups of belligerents.

It is, as a matter of fact, this assimilation which has provoked, in the Entente countries, a positive storm of protest against the implication. It might as well, at once, be thoroughly understood that the guarded statements of the Allied press, in a great national crisis, no less than the carefully weighed words of the public men in the Allied countries, do not necessarily represent the national temper. The press of the Entente Powers has on this momentous occasion shown, on the whole, a reticence which has been looked for as a rule more particularly amongst diplomatists. Anybody, however, who has means of knowing the unofficial view in the Allied countries, must have been made deeply conscious of the extraordinary feeling which has been evoked by the President's assimilation of the belligerents, as well as impressed by the awakened passions which still remain to be allayed. In saying this we do not, of course, for one moment mean to imply that in the drafting of such a note it was the President's business to have taken sides, or to have contrasted the belligerent groups. There was, however, no more necessity to assimilate their aims and methods than to contrast them; and it surely would have been wiser in the face of the pronounced views, known to be held by the Entente Powers, not to have assumed a commonality of purpose and action, which was bound to produce the strongest resentment.

The inevitability of this is seen in the long paragraph in which the Allies recite the incidents of what they describe as a violation of rules of war by the middle European alliance. This recital includes the shooting of Miss Cavell and of Captain Fryatt, as well as the Armenian atrocities, and in the course of its assessment it makes it perfectly clear that the Allied Powers are in no mood to overlook what they regard as these violations, but are determined to take them into account in any settlement which is eventually come to. What this settlement will be they do not pretend to divulge. It is quite probable that until the time comes actually to consider definite terms, they will not be in a position to do so. They state, quite frankly, in reply to the President's inquiry, that the terms of settlement will not be made known until the actual hour of negotiation arrives, but they go on to make it perfectly clear that any such terms must include the restoration of Belgium, Serbia, and Montenegro with indemnities; the evacuation of the occupied parts of France, Russia, and Rumania, with reparation; and the reorganization of Europe under guarantees for a stable regime. Further, that they must include the liberation of the Italian, Slav. Rumanian, and Slovak peoples from foreign domination; the restitution of territory wrested by force, in the past, from any of the Allies; the enfranchisement of the peoples subject to the tyranny of the Turks, and the final expulsion of the Ottoman Empire from Europe,

It will be seen in a moment that almost any redrawing of the map of Europe and Asia Minor is possible as the result of this; and it is also obvious that not one word is said about the restoration of the German Colonies. There is no doubt as to the fact that the restoration of countries occupied since the opening of hostilities, together with the payment of indemnities for the occupation will be part of the Allied demands. It is equally clear that it is the intention that the Turk should finally pass beyond the Bosphorus, and this, it is equally well known, means the passing of Constantinople and the Dardanelles into the hands of Russia. This alone would mean the complete destruction of the German plans for an empire in Asia Minor, exemplified in the construction of the Baghdad Railway. But furthermore, the somewhat cryptic references to the liberation of the peoples of Eastern Europe can scarcely be taken as referring to anything but the practical dismemberment of the Austrian Empire. It neans, if it means anything at all, the loss to that Empire of the whole of Italia Irredenta, in other words, of Trieste and the Dalmatian Coast, together with the Trentino and Albania; it means the surrender of Transylvania to the Rumanians, and of Bosnia and Herzegovina, with possibly parts of Croatia, to the Serbians; but as to what it has in store for the other Balkan peoples, namely, the Greeks and Bulgarians, it does not disclose. With respect to the intentions of France, it is true that nothing definite is said, but the statement as to the return of captured territory as well as the general drafting of the note, in addition to the claim deliberately made on Thursday at the opening of the Chambers, by Monsieur Deschanel, seems to place it beyond question that the restoration to France of Alsace-Lorraine will be one of the principal demands.

Of course, much of this is speculation, but it is a speculation brought about by Mr. Wilson's-proposal for the making known of the terms upon which the various belligerent countries would be prepared to negotiate, as well as by the phrasing of the Allies' reply to this proposal. It is, it need not be said, perfectly clear that the Entente Powers are quite aware that the terms they are indicating will have to be won by force of arms. To them it is, as Mr. Lloyd George said, on Thursday, in his speech in the Guildhall, that though victory may be difficult, defeat is none the less impossible. Consequently, in the closing words of the note, "united in the pursuits of this supreme object, the Allies are determined, individually, and collectively, to act with all their power, and to consent to all sacrifices necessary to bringing about a victorious close of a conflict upon which they are convinced not only their own safety and prosperity depends, but also the future of civilization itself."

, The Business Situation Reviewed

ONE important thing that is impressing itself upon leading business men is the necessity for cooperation among the countries of the world. It is particularly necessary in all trade relations, if the most desirable results are to be obtained. Friction, in all activities, is costly and unnecessary. When mankind learns that there is trade enough for the people of all nations there will probably be no more wars, and some day this fact will be generally, understood. There was never a more opportune time for the countries of the world to solve this question of international commerce than now. Every country is more or less dependent on every other country, for the entire world is, as it were, one great family. Every barrier that is put up for the assumed purpose of protecting one country against the rest of the world, or of giving that country a particular advantage overits neighbors, is inspired by self-interest, and is, therefore, in the final analysis, selfish and unjust. There is probably not a nation in the world that has not violated the Golden Rule in this respect, and it is time that civiliza-

Those who govern the financial affairs of the United States may think they are preserving the financial strength of their country by refusing further credit to other countries; but such a view is, to say the least, questionable and shortsighted. It is estimated that of the United States merchandise exports 60 per cent goes to Great Britain, Russia, and France. These countries must have goods on credit, for further payment in gold cannot long continue, if purchases are to be made on as large a scale as heretofore. Already there are indications that a portion of this trade is being diverted elsewhere, as a result of the Federal Reserve Board's warning to the banks against buying England's short-term treasury notes.

The United States, until within the last two years, has not had much to boast of in its international commerce. Since the war began this overseas trade has increased by leaps and bounds. The exports of the United States are now the largest of any nation. American merchandise and products of nearly every description are going to the furthermost corners of the globe. How long this condition will last, after the war, depends largely on the way the new customers of the United States are treated, and how justly the old ones are served in their extremity. In years gone by the industries of the United States were kept satisfactorily busy in supplying the needs of the people at home, but the war has developed the manufacturing output to such an extent that it has become urgently necessary to have a large permanent outlet abroad for the merchandise which the country is capable of turning out. All of these products, when peace is established, will come into competition with those of the belligerent countries. The United States will undoubtedly get its share of the world trade, but it is not entitled to a large share unless it is willing to give as well as to take. There is reason for the hope that the law of right will eventually supersede the law of might in the government of nations. The tremendous economic saving which such a state of things would afford .for the entire business world is beyond computation.

Automobiles and Pedestrians

THE constantly increasing number of automobiles and the corresponding increase in traffic, both upon the city streets and the country highways, emphasize the need of stricter regulations designed to safeguard this traffic, as well as the pedestrian. The increased use of the automobile, and the greater familiarity with it felt by drivers and persons who have attained some measure of adeptness in dodging powerful cars; often being driven far too recklessly, certainly do not, or should not, inspire a plea for less stringent regulations. In all states regulations to this end have been enacted, and presumably are being enforced. There appears to have been manifested, on the part of automobile owners, represented by automobile associations, and by municipalities and highway commissions, a conscientious desire and effort to frame such laws to fit the peculiar needs of the communities to which they are intended to apply. Massachusetts has a comprehensive statute, passed by the Legislature at the 1916 session, and in force during the last six months, which, at the time of its passage, had the unanimous approval of the members of the Highway Commission.

This law, designed to meet the particular need of the community, prohibits the operation of an automobile by a person who is "under the influence of intoxicating liquor," leaving to the trial court the determination of the question of fact.

Judges of courts charged with the enforcement of penalties for violations of the law approve it. They have encountered no difficulty in interpreting it, and it does not appear that the legislative intent has been questioned by lawyers called in to defend accused violators. The law certainly has the undivided approval of the vast majority of motorists, as well as of teamsters and pedestrians.

It is, in these circumstances, impossible to accept the view of the members of the Highway Commission that the inhibition should be made to apply only to persons "in a drunken condition." The man in question, in other words, must run amuck, or otherwise give ocular or visible proof of his incapacity before the arresting officer can interfere. There is an old adage, and a good one, which advises locking the stable door before the horse is stolen.

Statutes and ordinances have been enacted under which street traffic is directed, either by patrolmen stationed at the intersections of the principal streets or by established and recognized "rules of the road." Similar measures regulate head and rear lights, and the maximum speed at which machines may be driven. It is not always that a person "under the influence of liquor" cannot observe these rules and regulations. It is that he does not. He lacks in judgment, if not in the necessary skill. He is too ready to "take a chance."

Few men and women who drive their own cars will feel it their duty to intercede in behalf of the Highway Commission's effort to have the Legislature take the "teeth" out of this law. Its strict enforcement would perhaps be resented as a hardship, most frequently by hired chauffeurs and drivers of taxicabs. These, engaged virtually as common carriers, should be held to as strict a rule as that which is applied by railroad managers to their trainmen, and by nearly all street-car companies to their operatives.

"Buffalo Bill"

Much that is true and much that is fanciful will now be written concerning William Frederick Cody, commonly known, in his own and in other countries for the last half century, as "Buffalo Bill." In the very nature of the case no character like him will ever, appear again in the annals of the United States, since the conditions of which he was a product have forever passed away. He was not an isolated type, but rather an exceptionally pronounced expression of a type common in the trans-Missouri when the West was in the making.

"Kit" Carson, Davy Crockett, James Butler Hickok, or "Wild Bill," the mysterious "California Joe," John B. Omohundro, otherwise "Texas Jack," even Captain Jack Crawford, who now occasionally addresses evangelical meetings, were all representatives of that type. The plains and the mountains, lying between the "Big Muddy" and the Pacific Ocean, contained hundreds of the class of which "Buffalo Bill" was an acknowledged leader, between the late '40s and the early '80s.

The vocations and adventures around which the glamour of romance has been thrown, in these recent years, were commonplaces in early Western pioneer days. It was not a remarkable experience then to blaze one's trail, to encounter the hostile red man, to hunt the buffalo, to drive or ride in a "prairie schooner," to be "held up" by a road agent, to receive a letter or a remittance by "pony express," to "stake a claim," or to "strike gold." The sombrero, the buckskin trousers, the long hair and the mustang of the scout, the prospector, and the hunter were things familiar in the frontier settlements, towns, and cities. "Buffalo Bill" came and went, like scores of other, if lesser, celebrities in Omaha, Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Atchison and Leavenworth, without attracting more than a passing glance.

Fifty years ago the West was a land of adventure. Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, Crook, Terry, Miles, Carr, Merritt, Forsythe, and George Armstrong Custer were regularly going to or coming from the unsettled and disturbed areas. Members of the English royal family were often led to the haunts of big game, and once the Grand Duke Alexis of Russia, with Major-General "Phil" Sheridan for a companion, was guided to a buffalo run. Nearly always "Buffalo Bill" was the personal conductor of such parties. His horsemanship, his marksmanship, his stalwart form, his handsome face, his indubitable bravery and his genial temperament made him a general favorite.

When 10 years old he became a cowboy. This was in 1855, and his employer was later the senior partner in the greatest freighting firm that ever did business on the plains, Russell, Majors & Waddell. In the employ of this concern, he drove great lumbering wagons drawn by five yoke of oxen, or a mail stage, or rode an express pony, and he exhibited a reliability in the performance of his every task that was only less admirable than his daring. He drew about him, and won the admiration of. frontiersmen who were decidedly his seniors. While as vet a mere youth, he became a "terror" to the outlaws who infested the roads over which the stage coaches traveled, repelling their attacks and bringing passengers and treasure "in" safely. When the Civil War broke out he began as a dispatch bearer, and developed into one of the best scouts in the service. A score of general officers have borne voluntary and cheerful testimony to his usefulness. He never failed on a mission, and, from Gen. A. G. Smith to the gallant Custer, every commander whom he served looked upon him as his right hand.

The Indians knew him, and liked him, too. He had among them the reputation of one who kept his word, and this reputation more than once proved invaluable to settler and country. From boyhood on, "Buffalo Bill's" career literally teemed with interesting adventures, yet he was never a boaster or a bravo. The same rather refined and entirely modest demeanor that characterized him as a showman was one of his admirable traits in the days of his most famous exploits. He seemed to be unconscious of his celebrity, and, while he willingly profited in after years by its commercialization, even his publicity agents could not convince him of the wisdom or the necessity of posing.

William Frederick Cody was a Westerner who, in whatever position he was placed, and in whatever company he found himself, at home or abroad, depended on his native common sense. This prevented him from becoming melodramatic or a bore.

Notes and Comments

Senator Kenyon will not lack for support in his position that, as a result of the Supreme Court decision sustaining prohibition states in excluding liquor from their territory, the strict exclusion of liquor from interstate commerce in the near future is not improbable. A newspaper friendly to the liquor interests, commenting on the decision referred to, asked whether this decision would satisfy the prohibitionists, or whether they would be unreasonable and ask more. They will be logical and demand more.

The changes which the war is bringing about in social and political conditions, in the belligerent countries, are truly "wonderfuller and wonderfuller." Two years ago, if the idea of Labor members joining the Carlton Club in London had been so much as mooted, it is hard to say whether it would have been regarded as more preposterous in the Labor camp or in the Conservative camp. Yet, today, the point is quite calmly debated, and decision against such a possibility is given on purely technical grounds. The Carlton Club, one writer explains, requires a candidate to declare himself a supporter of the Unionist party. Labor members, although they support the Unionist party in these extraordinary times, do not declare themselves of that faith, and so are not eligible for membership of the Carlton.

THE Carlton Club, so called from being near the site of Carlton House, famous during the Regency, is to the Conservative party what the Reform Club is to the Liberal party. Founded by the Duke of Wellington in 1832, it has been one of the headquarters of Conservatism ever since. The present familiar building in Pall Mall was designed by Sir Robert Smirke, the famous architect of last century.

A FARMER named Thomas Gillaspie, of Collinsville, Ill., was hit by a locomotive, a few days ago, and only slightly inconvenienced. It was found that, at the time, he was wearing five waistcoats, two pairs of trousers, and three suits of underclothes. His is said to represent the most striking case of individual preparedness that has thus far come to light. In fact, he was so well prepared that he could not move out of the way of the locomotive quickly enough to avoid collision.

A Boston-built wooden square rigger might balk a little, on her reentrance into society, but her timidity could not last when she realized how general and how genial was the welcome awaiting her. The Boston-built wooden square rigger, under full canvas, used to be a thing of beauty on the high seas, and there is no good reason why she should not be a thing of beauty again.

WITH $2 wheat, dollar corn, 20-cent cotton, and high prices for almost everything else which the soil produces, it is little wonder that the American farmer is prosperous. He is now able to pay off his mortgage and buy an automobile. Whereas once it was necessary for him to get money from New York to move his crops, his home banks now supply the needed funds. He no longer is obliged to sell his crops as soon as they are harvested, but can hold them until he gets his price. Moreover, he has plenty of money in the bank, and his credit is A1.

A POINT raised by the general secretary of the National Amalgamated Union of Shop Assistants, Warehousemen and Clerks, in his evidence before the committee recently appointed to inquire into the working of the Summer-Time Act, is deserving of a wide publicity. The secretary pointed out that a section of the public will do their shopping through all the daylight hours, if they are allowed to do so, and that many shopkeepers are only too ready to take advantage of this fact, and keep their shops open. This is certainly a practice which needs to be dealt with summarily and effectively. No public interest is served by it, and, as the secretary justly maintained, it tends wholly to nullify the virtue of the measure, not only for the shop assistants, but for other shopkeepers in the district.

GOVERNOR FRANK O. LOWDEN, of Illinois, has come out for full suffrage for the women of that State. In his inaugural address he used, almost word for word, a paragraph, regarding the Illinois suffrage law, which appeared in this column about the time of the November election. That is, he said: "The present law does not embrace all of the elective statutory offices, and should be extended. It is an anomaly that women should have the right to vote for presidential electors and not for offices created by our State constitution." It is an anomaly, and it is also unfair.

IN CALIFORNIA a man is contesting in the courts the efforts of the county officials to collect the tax levied against his lands and personal property, his contention being that the total demanded is 3 cents greater than the amount actually due. Comment really seems unnecessary.

A STANDARD OIL expert estimates that the supply of crude oil in the United States will hold out but 138 years more, at the present rate of consumption. This, of course, offers an excuse for again putting up the price of gasoline, but, at the same time, it will hardly deter the man who has decided to get a car from completing his purchase, especially if he has spoken to an automobile salesman about his intentions.
